Note from Teacher:

Hi guys!

As the wise poet Justin Timberlake once said, "It's gonna be May" and here we are! For our first May NTI Assignment, I hope you guys have a little bit of fun with it. One of our typical writing exercises, the alternate ending writing, is a favorite of mine and hopefully yours too!

Today's Lesson:

Choose any readings in your home. (Books, magazines, newspaper articles). Read the information thoroughly and begin brainstorming endings for the reading. Once completed, create an alternative ending for your chosen reading that is at least 5 paragraphs in length. Full description of the ending must be included and details must align with the characters and plot of the reading/events of the newspaper article or magazine information. Alternate ending can still be creative and vastly different from original written ending. Have fun with this assignment!
